Scattered Thoughts

by Rev. Kerry Nelson, Senior Pastor

Well, this spring has not turned out like I thought it would. My family came to some unexpected twists in the road. We're not alone in that.

I thought my continuing education this year would consist of following in the footsteps of Paul and learning more about the New Testament. Instead I spent some time in the wilderness, and some time doing intensive inpatient family therapy and came away learning more about my daughter and myself.

I am very grateful for that time and I trust that it was God at work to bring healing into all of our lives. As always, when God is at work, our work is to surrender. To let go and let God. To get with the program.

Because of who I am, and because of what I do, no matter where I go or what I do, ministry and congregational life go with me. I am always, always, wondering about what God is up to.

What nudges ought I heed along the way? What does God want to do, in and through Christian community, to bring wholeness into peoples' lives? How do we join God in that, that God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven?

The family therapy we experienced consisted of a bunch of strangers gathering together to learn and share ourselves with each other. Which, to me, is a great way of imagining congregational life. We are always a bunch of strangers to one another (even to ourselves). We demonstrate hospitality to others because that is what it takes for us to experience hospitality ourselves. We come together to build up, to encourage each other. To praise God and to rely on God.

Family therapy looked like honesty, authenticity, vulnerability. There was a scientific, medical, component of learning about therapeutic interventions in wacky brain chemistry to help a troubled person come to a place where they are capable of doing the emotional, psychological

CCSC's Back to School Event

Each fall, the Christian Community Service Center (CCSC) distributes grade-appropriate school supplies and a voucher for a new school uniform and shoes to children from low-income families. In 2018, more than 6,000 children benefitted from the Back to School program.

Faith Lutheran Church will host the 2019 distribution of these school supplies on August 2 – 3. On these two days, more than 2,000 families will visit our church campus to receive the school supplies and vouchers for their children. Faith Lutheran will again offer our hospitality to those with significant financial need.

What can I do to sponsor a student?

It costs only $45.00 to provide each child with a comprehensive packet of school supplies and new clothing/shoes in line with their school's uniform requirements. Please consider donating funds to the Back to School program for one or more students.

Donations of any amount can be contributed in one of two ways:

- → Donate online! The CCSC website is a convenient way to give, and your gift can be designated to Back To School: www.ccschouston.org
- → Donate through Faith Lutheran Church. Include your donation with your church offering. Designate 'Back to School' on your check or offering envelope.

How can I help with this event?

Look for volunteer opportunities at the sign up table on Sundays, July 14, 21, or 28.

The mission of Faith Lutheran Church is to follow Jesus in blessing the world with faith, hope, and love.

work. There was the spiritual component of telling the truth, listening closely, risking saying the hard thing, forgiving one another, trusting the Spirit's presence.

As I drove home, reliving the experience in my memory, I kept thinking about congregational life. We are always front and center about peoples' physical health. Last year, about the same time of year, I was home following surgery. I was blessed with an outpouring of love in prayers, visits, and food. But how responsive are we, or can we be, around issues of mental health?

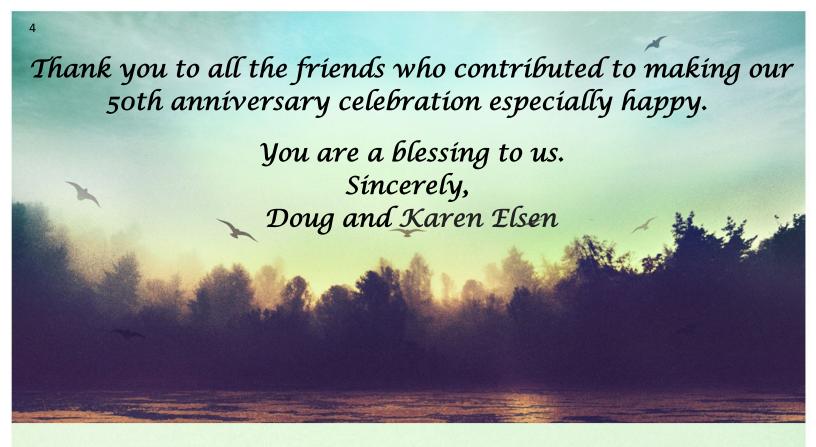

Are there ways of doing Christian community together to create healing spaces in peoples' lives who struggle with their own or their loved ones' mental health? Both the answer and the challenge are clear to me. The answer is absolutely YES. And the challenge is the power of shame. Toxic shame.

Every week we have hundreds of people who come to our campus to support one another in maintaining healthy lives, free from the insanity of addictive illnesses. They would all tell you that it is easy to quit but it is hard to keep quitting. They can't do it alone and they can't do it without relying on God and each other. So they show up for one another. Some show up multiple times a week, some every day.

For almost 100 years now, such gatherings required the cloak of anonymity as the only means of getting people past the toxic shame that was keeping them sick. Over that time, the medical and therapeutic communities have continued to learn more about family systems, genetics, brain chemistry, and both process and chemical addictions. As we have learned more about mental illness some of its shame has been replaced with understanding and empathy. Some. But we still have a long way to go.

I'm wondering today if anonymity isn't as helpful as it used to be. I know this is heretical thinking but some of the greatest moves in history were started by heretics. I want to think about these issues because they matter. Right now I'm thinking that it is time to take a new kind of action. To look more deeply into the character and nature of congregational life. To become more willing to take risks and be vulnerable. To trust that the best way to know God more fully is to know other people, and to know ourselves, more fully.

Now is the season for vacation and long rides on my motorcycle. Now you know what will be on my mind when I turn the music off and ponder. How can we best help each other help each other?

Sowing the Seeds of Love

by Rev. Junfeng Tan, Associate Pastor

Since the beginning of Faith Chinese Fellowship in October 2013, many Chinese visiting scholars and their families have been warmly welcomed into the Faith family. Most of these visiting scholars are university faculty members or physicians at major hospitals in China. They come to visit and do research at University of Houston, Rice University, Texas Southern University, and the Texas Medical Center. They stay in Houston for a year or two and then return to China.

Jingtao Luo is a physician from a prominent cancer Institute in Tianjin, China. When he came as a visiting scholar to MD Anderson in 2014, his mother Grace Li followed him and lived in Houston for a year. Both Jingtao and Grace came to Faith and joined Faith choir. They faithfully participated in choir rehearsal on Thursday evenings and singing on Sunday mornings. Grace also joined Faith's ESL class and was very active in the Faith Chinese Fellowship. She was baptized on February 8, 2015, and return to China in August of the same year. Almost four years later, Grace and a good friend of hers came to travel in the U.S. and spent a week in Houston in late April and early May. While in Houston, she went to choir practice and sang with the choir on Sunday. She and friends of Faith Chinese Fellowship participated in the Greater Houston NAMI Walk of May 4. She even found time to volunteer at Houston Food Bank. Alan Balius, the choirmaster of Faith, upon seeing the photos of Grace and her friend at the Food Bank on Facebook, wrote a Facebook note, "So Grace visits us on her vacation in the U.S. and volunteers to help others at the Food Bank. This is what a follower of Jesus looks like."

Grace came to see me in the church office and said, "Special circumstances prevent me from participating in church activities in China. However, I have spread the love of God with the works of my hands." She told me that after returning to China in 2015, she started two volunteer organizations in the district of her city: one is a book club, the other is a charity that is named "Loving Heart Volunteer Station." Each organization has a membership of over 300 people. Her charity receives donations of books, clothes, toiletries, and household necessities and then ships them to remote and poor villages and schools. They even network with other organizations to deliver truck-loads of poverty relief materials and school supplies to places as far as Tibet and Xinjiang. She and her volunteers also visit residents in nursing homes and autistic kids in a special education school. When it is a holiday or festival, they always bring fruits and special presents to the elders and students. "I cannot share the gospel with my mouth, but I can do it with my hands." Grace repeated this several times to me. It is my prayer that God continues to lead and guide Grace and bless her works of charity.

Jesus once told a parable of a farmer going out to sow seeds. "And as he sowed, some seeds fell on the path, and the birds came and ate them up. Other seeds fell on rocky ground, where they did not have much soil, and they sprang up quickly, since they had no depth of soil. But when the sun rose, they were scorched; and since they had no root, they withered away. Other seeds fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up and choked them. Other seeds fell on good soil and brought forth grain, some a hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty. Let anyone with ears listen!" (Matthew 13:4-9) Jesus wants us not to be discouraged when the seeds fall on the path, rocky ground, or among the thorns. It is part of the business of sowing seeds. But I do not think that is the focal point of his parable. I believe the main purpose of this parable is to assure us that some seeds will definitely fall on good soil. Jesus wants us to be confident and get ready to rejoice and celebrate when these seeds "brought forth grain, some a hundred-fold, some sixty, some thirty." Therefore, let us diligently and joyfully sow the seeds of God's Kingdom, the seeds of faith, love, and hope. Let us trust that God will make them grow and produce much fruit.

Pentecost is June 9

by Dr. Clayton Faulkner, Director of Worship, Music, and Technology

Pentecost is one of the key festival Sundays on our liturgical calendar. It is like the birthday for the church. We remember and celebrate the movement of the Holy Spirit as told in Acts 2. It was the birth of something new and God's power being infused with the followers of Jesus.

"What does this mean?" the devout ask (Acts 2:12). For those gathered in that house, the event meant the birth of sudden, surprising, unmerited new life. Filled with the Holy Spirit, they burst from the house with a story to share about God's wonders. But what does this event of Pentecost mean for us, today, many centuries later? God is at work here, now, in the world. Through the gift of the Holy Spirit, the Advocate, God is walking alongside as friend, truth-teller, comforter, and guide.

The writer of John's gospel speaks of it in this way: the Advocate, the one whom the Father will send, will teach the disciples everything they need to know. God is not yet finished revealing who God is, and the disciples are not yet finished learning. Through the Spirit of truth, the disciples will do the work of Jesus, and his life will continue through them.

In holy baptism, the Spirit rests on the heads of young and old alike. Filled with the Holy Spirit, the baptized have an old, old story to tell of Jesus and his love—and a new, new story of how God is birthing sudden, surprising, and unmerited new life all around us, every day. God is at work, here, now in the world through the lives of everyday Christians. Jesus' work continues through the lives of all the baptized. We discover meaning from this Pentecost story today, not only for our own sake but for the sake of the world that so hungers for this life.

Pentecost is a great day to remind ourselves that God is not something we have control of. God is not a neat, tidy pet that we keep in a box and only turn to with our petitions and need for mercy. God is like a fierce wind that will strip things down to their foundations. God is not containable or predictable. The wind blows where it wants and when it wants. And sometimes we are shocked to see where the Spirit is going.

We mark Pentecost Sunday in many different ways. You will see young people processing while waving different things: red streamers, birds, and butterflies. The music will have some rhythm to it. We will sing and hear a variety of languages.

We try to make the day a little festive and surprising as well. One year we filled the sanctuary with red confetti (you can occasionally still find a piece in the pews). Another year we had flame-like balloon sculptures. What will happen this year? You'll have to come and see for yourself!

Mission Trip to Puerto Rico

by John Vickery, Director of Youth and Family Ministry

The plane tickets are bought, our bags are (mostly) packed, and we are ready to depart in just a few days bound for Puerto Rico. We cannot thank the congregation enough for making this trip a reality and we can't wait to share with you all of our experiences. If you are one of our stockholders, be watching your email inbox for updates directly from Puerto Rico throughout the trip. We will also be giving a report to the whole congregation on Sunday, July 28.

Prayer Corner - Bread That Satisfies

by Peggy Porter

Read John 6:35-51 and Psalm 90:14-17

John 6:35 – "I am the bread of life; whoever comes to me shall not hunger and whoever believes in me shall never thirst."

In Jesus, we're always satisfied, even when we don't realize it. He gives daily bread for our bodies, the forgiveness of sins, and everlasting life. In him, we have everything we need, a promise as certain as God. But this side of heaven involves dealing with sinful flesh that seeks to doubt God's word. Satan stirs us to chase food that perishes, and we're all guilty of heeding his voice and devouring the wrong foods.

At these sins exposed by the Law, we can only repent and hear again Jesus' promise: "whoever comes to me shall not hunger, and whoever believes in me shall never thirst." Eternity is bound up in this promise for the Church. When we lack physical things, we know that in Christ our sufferings and lack are temporary. When God gives us an abundance—and so often does!—we can respond in thanksgiving for daily bread.

In times of lack or in times of plenty, the baptized believer is satisfied in Christ, who sustains us both physically and spiritually. He absolves us of sin and promises us life eternal. At that time, hunger and thirst will be no more.

Pray: Gracious heavenly Father, teach us to look to you and trust in your provision. Let us not chase food that perishes but crave the bread of life that truly satisfies. Amen.

The Peace of God by John Vickery, Director of Youth and Family Ministry

The differences in the seasons will never cease to amaze me. Sure the weather changes, but in this case I'm talking about our schedules. For the purposes of this article, I'm going to focus in on two particular seasons: school year and summer. During the school year, I know that families are pulled in a multitude of directions. If a family has more than one child, those directions only begin to multiply as each child has different activities. Scheduling anything during the academic year tends to be a struggle, and sometimes it feels that there is no possible way to fit even one more thing onto the calendar.

Then comes summer break. All of a sudden a huge chunk of the day has opened up, and the question becomes what do we do with all of this newfound time? I remember growing up always counting down the days to summer vacation to get to summer, really enjoy the time off for two or three weeks, and then start counting down the days until school started again because I had gotten bored.

What is interesting to me is how my busy seasons have shifted. Several years ago while I was in school that required me to be on campus from 7:30 AM until 2:10 PM and then have swim practices, band rehearsals, and so on. That schedule occupied 90% of my days from September until June. Now my busiest time of the year is the summer months, June until September. Here in just a few days I'll be leading the High Schoolers on their mission trip to Puerto Rico. Almost as soon as we get back we start gearing up for Faith Camp Training, and then the three weeks of actual Faith Camp. Then come August I'm knee deep in planning the next High School trip and events for the entire year to be ready to set into action as soon as September hits.

Now, you may be thinking to yourself, "yes, we are all busy why remind us of this fact?" There is one constant that remains in my life through both of these seasons...my faith. Growing up this was something that was demonstrated to me by Mom. If I had not had this example in my childhood, I think that it would be easy for me to rationalize why I could skip church, or skip youth group on account of my busy schedule. So, I encourage all of you to take advantage of the summer months, when schedules may be a little less hectic, and make your faith a priority. Reconnect with those who are around you, and perhaps build some new relationships that could carry into the coming year. Let those relationships with each other grow and be a source of mutual support. I love the line from the movie Drumline, "One band, One Sound." I think this is an example for us as well. To show such support to our brothers and sisters in Christ, to the tune of being one voice that proclaims the love of Jesus.

Happy Father's Day.

We love and appreciate you!
